317. "NO" DRAMA MASKS (TWENTY PIECES).

The dramas called No, which were developed in the fifteenth century from the early religious plays of the thirteenth, were written by the actors themselves, and by Buddhist monks for the most part of the Zen sect. Like the art of this period the drama was remarkable for its restraint. Realism was not enhanced by stage settings, in fact the only accessories were the robes and the masks of the actors.

These masks were at first few, but by degrees became more specialized till they served to express an almost infinite variety of character. The sculptors attained great skill in reducing human traits and emotions to their essentials and eliminating the unnecessary lines of the countenance. This fact, together with the consideration that they were made to be seen from a distance, accounts for something of their weird appearance.

In this collection are representatives of the masks for special characters in the drama; Kagekiyo, a blinded knight, Yorimasa a defeated general, Semimaru the blind musician Prince; also mythological beings,—Yamauba a mountain spirit, and Shojo, the red faced Bacchus. There were men, demons, gods and ghosts, but the last were the commonest. We have here Chujo and Heida, two heroes of noble birth, and Yascotoko and Daiakujo, who were peasants.

Owned by Marquis Mayeda Toshinari.
(See Pictures Nos. 191-194.)

MODELS OF OLD BUILDINGS.

318. KONDO (THE GOLDEN HALL) OF HORYUJI, NARA.

(See Picture No. 196.)

320. PORTABLE SHRINE CALLED TAMAMUSHI.

The shrine is decorated with wing sheaths of beetles between metal ornaments. The construction of the upper part of the shrine will show somewhat of the manner of building palaces in Empress Suiko's days. The four sides of the shrine are painted with a pigment made of mitsudaso (Litharge) and the pictures are called Mitsudaye. The original is in the possession of Horyuji, Nara.

Owned by Mr. Tamai Kyujiro, Nara.

(See Picture No. 197.)

321. THE EAST PAGODA OF YAKUSHIJI.

The construction of the pagoda will be the end of the 7th century.

It is three-roofed, and the three "Curtain Roofs" are hung in the intervals between the three proper roofs, and the bottom half of the lower story is encased by a solid curtain. Therefore it looks, at a glance, like a six-storied pagoda.

Owned by the Tokyo Fine Art School.

(See Picture No. 198.)

322. GREAT HALL OF THE DAIBUTSU AT TODAIJI.

The Hall was constructed for the first time in 752, but it was burnt down twice by battle-fires and reconstructed each time. The building is the largest in the whole world of those constructed with timber. The present model is one of the very first construction.

Owned by Todaiji, Nara.

(See Pictures Nos. 199, 200.)

323. HOWODO OF BYODOIN, KYOTO.

The building was consecrated in 1053. It is in the form of a Howo (Phœnix). It has a central hall with wings, and a long hall stretching to the rear at right angles with the main axis. The outside decoration is very simple, but the interior is rich with the designs characteristic of the period.

Owned by the Office of the Imperial Government Commission to the Japan-British Exhibition.

(See Pictures Nos. 201, 202.)

324. KORO OF TOSHODAIJI.

The first building of this Koro was constructed in 759, but the present one was rebuilt by the Shogun Minamoto no Yoritomo towards the end of the 12th century. The plan and the main elevation are after the design of the first building, but the minor parts reveal the characteristics of the first part of the Kamakura period (12th century).

Owned by Toshodaiji temple, Nara.

(See Picture No. 203.)

325. SHURO OF TODAIJI, NARA.

This was first constructed in 752, but was blown down somewhat later by a typhoon and the present building erected in its stead, perhaps in the middle of the Kamakura Period (13th century).

Owned by the Office of the Imperial Government Commission to the Japan-British Exhibition.

(See Picture No. 204.)

326. KINKAKU OF ROKUONJI.

Built in 1397.

Owned by Rokuonji, Kyoto.

(See Pictures Nos. 205, 206.)

327. THE TAHO PAGODA OF DAIDENBOIN, KII.

The first edifice was constructed in 1129, but the present one was rebuilt in the Eisho Era (1504-1520).

Owned by the Office of the Imperial Government Commission to the Japan-British Exhibition.

(See Picture No. 207.)

328. HIUNKAKU OF HONGWANJI, KYOTO.

This Hiunkaku was removed from the grounds of the Juraku Palace built by Hideyoshi during the later years of the 16th century.

Owned by the Office of the Imperial Government Commission to the Japan-British Exhibition.

(See Pictures Nos. 208, 209)

329. KARAMON OF DAITOKUJI, KYOTO.

This splendid gate was also removed from the Juraku Palace of Hideyoshi. Its sculptural decorations fully reveal the characteristics of the Momoyama Period.

Owned by the Office of the Imperial Government Commission to the Japan-British Exhibition.

(See Picture No. 210.)

330. YOMEIMON OF TOSHOGU, NIKKO.

The Yomeimon consists of three spans and a single entrance, the construction dates from the early 18th century and all its splendor and elegance were brought out by craftsmen of the early part of the Tokugawa era.

Owned by the Office of the Imperial Government Commission to the Japan-British Exhibition.

(See Picture No. 211.)
